Juvenile Courts Can Not Assume Responsibility of Parent—D.A.

The responsibility of keeping children out of trouble these days is not one parents can pass on to Juvenile Courts, probation or police officers, District Attorney William B. McKesson declared today.

"Prevention of juvenile delinquency is a cooperative effort that requires the home, school, church and community working together," he said.

McKESSON recalled that during his 14 years on the bench as a Juvenile judge, scarcely a day passed without somebody telling him what caused juvenile delinquency. He said these persons would name various causes ranging from broken homes, liquor, and automobiles to lack of playgrounds and even modern education.

"I finally became intrigued and kept track of these 'single' causes," he continued. "When the list reached 137, I quit counting and began to have misgivings about the validity of what I was being told." The District Attorney said he finally reached the conclusion that there is no single cause for juvenile delinquency "any more than there is a single remedy."

GENERALLY speaking, however, when a youngster gets into trouble McKesson believes an adult is usually at the root of it, whatever the cause. Family life, or lack of it, is a major contributor, McKesson insists.

"Ours is a world of inconsistencies. We have shrunk the size of the world by faster modes of travel yet we've increased the distance between people living in the same apartment house."

HE SAID that where once close personal relationships existed, now a wall exists between teacher and pupil, and policeman and citizen, and parent and child.

"While space is spanned at supersonic speeds, a boy today has trouble getting to his father these days. The kind of family life in too many homes in America today breeds strangers instead of kinfolks."

DISTRICT Attorney McKesson urged youth be provided "the strengthening, soul-satisfying assurance that can only be found in religious training. He needs to know with unshakable faith there is a refuge he can turn to for spiritual guidance. Of such knowledge is calmness built, serenity developed, temptations overcome, and achievement possible."

He said he took a survey while on the California Youth Authority and found in one year that only 11 out of 400 boys coming before him had had any religious training in the home. Only 42 of the 400 had had Sunday School or Church experience.

North Torrance Residential Unit Leads County By Reaching Quota

First to reach quota in the Community Chest's Greater Los Angeles area residential campaign was North Torrance section 7341A under chairman Mrs. Mary Gordon, 3813 W. 773rd Street. Other North Torrance sections are expected to go over quota according to Mrs. Nena Schneider, North Torrance Unit Chairman. "I am very pleased at the cooperation we have had from the volunteers here," said Mrs. Schneider, 3520 W. 185th St. "I am happy that one of our sections was the first to reach quota. I anticipate that as other sections report in this weekend, we will exceed the North Torrance residential quota of $2908."

Workers in section 7341A with Mrs. Gordon are Mrs. Evonne Tomich, 3830 W. 173rd St.; Mrs. Margaret Pilon, 3818 W. 173rd St.; Mrs. Mary Gonzalez, 3929 W. 147th Pl.; Mrs. Pat Skelley, 16832 Ainsworth; Mrs. P. J. Lavelle, 3714 W. 146th St., and Mrs. Mary Coghil, 17006 Kornblum. Also assisting Section Chairman Mrs. Gordon, are Mrs. Dorothy Ball, 17102 Delia; Mrs. B. Zook, 17124 Eastward Ave.; Mrs. Ann White, 2700 W. 182nd Pl.; Mrs. Donna Hughes, 3834 W. 176th St.; Mrs. Marion Moore, 4154 Redondo Beach Blvd.; Mrs. Edith Bussiere, 3912 W. 148th St., and Mrs. Tommie Patterson, 17019 Kornblum St.

BIE Day Set For March 17

The Torrance Schools have accepted an invitation from the Torrance Chamber of Commerce for holding the third Business - Industry - Education Day on March 17, 1961.

Under the program, Torrance's more than 1000 teachers will visit various businesses and industries in the area to learn how the free enterprise system works. Such an observance was held in 1958 and 1959, with the businessmen visiting schools last year. The idea is to promote better understanding between the teachers and businessmen to let them know the problems involved in both areas.
